

CARVING BLADE — EASY TO FIND

By George White

I confess that I'm a guy who likes to carve props. Believing that the only good carving knives were probably made in Sweden, I forked over some significant bucks to get a nice Swedish carving knife.

I recently had a conversation with Don DeCook, a builder of outstanding airplanes, about carving knives and he proceeded to show me a simpler way. He gave me a sample of an extremely sharp X-ACTO blade which fits into any one of several handles, of which many of us already have. The photo below explains everything.
